The three baby Red pandas curl up for a nap. They feel snug with their mom's bushy tail wrapped around them.

Mom Red panda is like a coach with her cubs. She teaches them how to climb the trunk of a tree. They learn how to roam safely across the branches. Her goal is to make her cubs able to fend for themselves in the forest. One day soon they will be on their own.

Later, while the cubs feast on the tasty egg, Momma Red panda thinks about what she will teach her cubs to keep them safe.

When the cubs wake up, they are hungry. Momma Red panda leaves the den to search for food.

Momma says, "Play safe and I will bring back a treat for you to eat."

Momma Red panda creeps up to a bird's nest filled with yummy eggs.

When Momma Red panda looks down below, she sees her baby in danger on the lower branch. Momma races down the trunk of the tree and leaps to rescue her cub. She reaches the cub just in time and grabs her by the fur.

Just then, Momma arrives back at the den. She sees two of her cubs peering out of the den and hears the frantic call from her other cub. She quickly lays down the egg she stole for their meal.

Back at the den, the cubs forget about playing safe. They tumble, dive, and rumble.

One cub sways back and forth and then leans too far back. She tumbles right out of the hole leading to the den.

The other two cubs feel shocked as their sister sails out of their home and begins to fall down, down, down.

The little cub lands with a thump on a branch below. Lucky for her, the branch stops her fall.

“Yip, yap, help me! I can’t climb back up,” she wails.

“Hold on tight!” her brothers squeal.
