

Poem: Two Sounds of 'oo'

If I could, I would cook food by a campfire that I would start with a pile of wood and keep the flames going on a moonlit night
when crickets are chirping and owls take flight.
And in the morning when all that is left is soot,
I would gather more wood in the forest by foot.
Yes, I would cook food by a campfire.
That is, I would if I could.

If I could, I would catch a fish
with a worm on a hook
as my fishing pole shook cause the fish took the hook
and swam away in the brook.
I might act like a fool
to fish and miss school.
Yes, I would catch a fish.
That is, I would if I could.

If I could, I would read a good book about what a crook took
and how a hero stood up to the crook
and swooped by to save the day.
Yes, I would read a good book and I could and I should read the book at the foot of my bed.
That's what I said.
I would if I could, and I can.
